James is a founding member and managing partner of UNO and is head of the Washington, DC office. James specializes in the economic analysis and financial and cost accounting issues associated with trade remedy matters. He has participated extensively in trade remedy proceedings conducted by the U.S. Department of Commerce, the Departamento de Defesa Comercial (Brazil), the Ministry of Commerce (People's Republic of China), the Ministry of Commerce & Industry (India) and the European Commission. Based on his extensive knowledge of government laws, regulations and practices, James has developed systematic and proven methodologies for providing assistance to companies involved in trade remedy proceedings. James has advised companies located in the United States, Brazil, Mexico, Canada, China, Belgium, France, Korea, Indonesia, India, Japan and Thailand among others. He has experience working with companies in the steel, chemical, agriculture, textile, forestry, automotive and consumer good industries. James has also participated as an expert in trade remedy seminars conducted in Vietnam and China.

James worked for three years at the U.S. Department of Commerce as a case analyst in the Office of Antidumping/Countervailing Duty Enforcement in which he was responsible for managing trade remedy proceedings, leading verifications of foreign respondents and modeling dumping margin programs using SAS software. While at the U.S. Department of Commerce, Mr. Breeden was recognized for his contribution to the antidumping and countervailing duty regulations published in 1998.

Prior to joining Uno, James worked at the economic consulting firm ITR LLC for ten years where he held the position of Senior Manager. His responsibilities included managing project teams in the collection and development of clients' sales and cost information required by the U.S. Department of Commerce and foreign governments and supervising the analysis of market-specific pricing information and cost of production information in order to estimate potential antidumping duty liability.

Mr. Breeden holds a BA in History from Southern Methodist University and a Masters in International Business Studies from the University of South Carolina.
